Some Form of Master's Requirement Is Likely

There is little doubt that the School Committee will vote at its next meeting to step up professional requirements for teachers hired to fill secondary school posts.

There was no action Tuesday on Robert Sherman's earlier motion that the department's rules and regulations make a master's degree mandatory for secondary teachers. But there was broad agreement on basic issues and a fresh motion incorporating compromises is to be prepared in time for the committee's July 5 meeting.

One compromise was proposed by the Andover Teachers Assn. which is expected to show up in the final policy statement. Taking a strong position, the organization recommended that teacher's coming into the system at the secondary level without master's degrees be given five years to meet this requirement and that those who do not meet this deadline be denied salary adjustments until such time as they complete advanced degree work.

The teachers also suggested that the rules and regulations indicate that preference in hiring would be given not only to experienced teachers but, at the secondary level, to teachers holding master's degrees.

Sherman's initial motion would have made master's degrees mandatory for all secondary teaching candidates in 1967. Among the amendments he proposed Tuesday was one to establish a master's policy as of 1968 and give newly hired secondary teachers three years to comply. He then suggested that the requirement be mandatory as of 1970-71.

Supt. Edward I. Erickson has indicated a reluctance to have any master's restriction placed on secondary hiring. He has said that an absolute policy would tie his hands.

The committee heard the report of the professional portion of the committee appointed to study the extent to which economics is in-

Musgrove Site Tops Town Hall Favorites

Big Bazaar Next 2 Days

Nearly 50 civic, social, religious and commercial organizations will have a hand in the staging of the Seventh Annual Sidewalk Bazaar this weekend, Chairman Alex Milne reported today.

The bazaar is a project of the Andover Chamber of Commerce which has grown from its start as a retail sales promotion into a two-day community event. Virtually every non-profit organization with a cause now joins the merchants to fill Main Street with bargain booths, food concessions and entertainment.

The fair gets underway tomorrow and will be open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Sat.

The full schedule of events is printed on page 4 of this issue of the TOWNSMAN and a listing of booths, their locations and sponsors is on page 5.

Unless there is some switching of preferences before June 27, it looks like the selectmen will approach voters in the fall with a proposal for locating the new municipal office building in the Musgrove block on Elm Square.

They will be supported by the recommendation of a committee named to study the problem of locating a number of public buildings.

At Tuesday's meeting of this group, which includes members from the planning board and Andover Chamber of Commerce, three selectmen indicated a distinct preference for the Musgrove site. No final vote will be taken, however, until the selectmen receive cost estimates on some parcels in the area that were not part of the original proposal.

It has been previously estimated that the town would have to spend $200,000 to acquire the Musgrove building itself, some other of the frame structures off Post Office Avenue and the theater building on Essex Street (for Parking space). Upon the recommendation of Architect Archibald MacLaren, however, the board is now looking into the possibility of broadening the scope of the project to include the taking of land now

Town Will Open Pomp's After All

Pomp's Pond will be open to the public this season, despite earlier feelings that it would be impossible to operate a swimming program in the drought stricken municipal "pool."

Recreation Director Leslie Bartow said this week that though there is still uncertainty about just how much of the beach will be in use and just how extensive a swimming program can be offered, the pond will be open for business as of Sunday, June 26. Lifeguards will be on duty.

The level of the pond is well above that of last year, but attempts to arrange for dredging to level the bottom for this season have been thus far unsuccessful.

John Milne will return as waterfront director, Bartow said, and a schedule for classes will be forthcoming. Milne and all other summer recreation personnel will report for orientation next week, new employees checking in at 9 a.m. on June 28 and those with local experience a day later. The information sessions will be held at Andover Recreation Park, 175 Abbot St.

of new apartments built by C. Lincoln Giles at the point where Post Office Avenue, a private street, bends to meet Elm.

Maclaren told the study committee that to conform to present zoning regulations on structure height and parking, the town would have to work with a larger area than that first considered. The Spa-market property is assessed for $60,800, Giles' apartments are assessed for $115,000.

Second Choice

If the board backs away from the Elm Square location, the second most favored location appears to be a portion of the high school acreage on Shawsheen Rd. Five of those participating in the latest discussion of the town hall question listed this area as a second choice.

Included in this group was Selectman Robert A. Watters.

During the evening, Watters withdrew from his long-term position that the town hall should be built to the rear of the municipal parking lot and listed as his number one preference the so-called Killorin property which adjoins this lot on Main Street.

He said he had consulted a number of people whose judgment he respected and all had disagreed with the rear-of-the-lot proposal. Watters added that he still favored construction of a Colonial building and said that in his opinion there was only one spot where one would be suitable - the Killorin land. He proposed putting the building lengthwise on the lot, facing the parking area.

He went on to tell the study committee that if this site is ruled out, he would favor putting the building outside the center. "We have been told we should put it where it would have the greatest impact on the business district, and I have been thinking we might make the greatest impact by taking it out of the business district altogether."

There was solid agreement on one issue: the full committee favors clearing the present town hall block and constructing a parking mall there which would hopefully prove a stimulus to improvement of properties along Park and Barnard Streets. As part of this discussion, Manager Richard Bowen threw out the suggestion that Main Street, Park and Barnard Street sidewalks be widened three feet to permit the planting of shade trees. This would represent a restoration of a previous "Main Street look."

why trees couldn't be set out on the lower end of Elm Street and along Main Street all the way to Shawsheen Square. "I think one of the ugliest parts of Andover is from Harding Street to Shawsheen Square," he said.

The point that is tipping the balance toward the Musgrove block as a town hall site is the fact that it provides the opportunity for self-urban renewal.

The area is regarded as blighted by the study committee and more than one speaker Tuesday said he doubted if a private developer could be found who would undertake its improvement because of the complexity of the zoning and parking problems that would be faced by anyone not in a position to undertake clearing more than just the Musgrove site itself.

In a headcount of the committee, the choices stacked up as follows:

Board of Selectmen - Robert A. Watters, Killorin first, high school site, second; Roger Collins, Musgrove, first, high school site, second; Philip K. Allen, Musgrove first, high school site, second; Sidney P. White, Musgrove first, Killorin and/or Lally, second; Chairman William Stewart, Killorin first, Musgrove, second.

Others: Harold King, planning board, Lally, first and Bartlet Street, second; James Trenholm, planning board, Lally, first, away from business district, second; Austin Anderson, Andover Chamber of Commerce, Musgrove, first, out of center, second.

Robert Henderson, representing the finance committee, expressed a preference for clearing the present town hall site. He also said he thought the building should be downtown. But he pointed out that it was his first meeting with the study group and that his opinions were made without benefit of participating in earlier discussions. There was a delay in naming a Finance Committee representative to the committee because the town moderator did not appoint a 1966 committee until last week.

TOWN WILL

Public playgrounds in Andover will open July 5 and continue their program five days a week through Aug. 26, Bartow said. Supervised play will be in progress from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at each playground Monday through Friday. In addition, the Ballardvale recreation area will be open from 5 to 8 p.m.

Bartow said the emphasis this season will be on the broadening of art and sports programs. There will be an experienced art teacher working at Andover Recreation Park to give interested youngsters background in nature art, sketching, etc. In addition to the usual arts and crafts. Two men with sports experience will circulate organizing sports activities at the various play areas and encouraging the growth of inter-club ground competitions. Competition in other activities is also to be encouraged, Bartow said.

HONORARY DEGREE as doctor of science is awarded to Frederick Johnson at Tufts University commencement exercises.

Peabody Curator Honored

Frederick Johnson, curator of the Peabody Foundation for Archaeology, Phillips Academy, was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of science during commencement exercises held on the Tufts University campus June 5.

A graduate of Tufts, Johnson is a pioneer in developing the multidisciplinary approach to archaeology and in the application of radiocarbon dating.

Appointed Peabody Foundation curator in 1936, he established a program for archaeological research which stressed the cooperation of scientists from many fields. Several joint projects under his direction involved collaboration of archaeologists, geologists, biologists and others, including work on the Boylston Street Indian Fishweir in Boston and along the route of the Alaska Highway in 1944 and 1948.

Johnson carried out extensive studies of the American Indian, which took him to Stevens Island and Pointe Bleu in Quebec, along the Ottawa River Valley, and to Parry Island in Lake Huron where he lived with the Ojibwa. He also did considerable work with the Micmac Indians in Cape Breton.

The Foundation's project in the Tehuacan Valley of Mexico in 1961 led Johnson to develop radiocarbon dating of archaeological finds which indicate the need for revision of current chronology which has been developed for prehistoric events in the Central American area.

He is a past president of the Society for American Archaeology, former executive secretary of the American Anthropological Association and a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

JGB Leaders Are Sought

The Andover school system plans to introduce a Junior Great Books course for children in the fifth and sixth grade enrichment program.

Guidance Director William Igou, head of the program, has announced that the special course will aim at developing the child's knowledge of great authors' works through group discussions led by two adult leaders. Volunteer discussion leaders will take a training course offered tuition-free by the Great Books Foundation in the fall. The leaders' function will be to ask questions that encourage examination of books by such authors as Aesop, Hawthorne, Dickens, Stevenson and Kipling.

Mrs. Alexander Warren and Mrs. David Riddiford are assisting with organization of the Junior Great Books Program. They are eager to enlist the help of interested persons in the community who will be discussion leaders.

The leaders will meet every other week with small groups of children to help them to think more clearly and independently, to express themselves more effectively and to listen more intently.

Robert W. Sides Jr. of Andover graduated June 10 from the University of Denver with a class of 1,355 seniors.

A New EmphasisIndustrial Arts For Every Boy

(A Townsman News Feature)

The time has come for all good men to know one end of a hammer from another, to understand what makes a good house good, to comprehend the various characteristics of woods and metals, to have some basic knowledge about what goes into the manufacturing of a product and to appreciate the value of fine workmanship.

The modern man needs to know these things partly because he must make a living in an industrial economy and partly because he must function as head of a household in a competitive society where kindly old handy men are as scarce as hen's teeth.

It is for these reasons that Andover High School is placing fresh emphasis on a broadening Industrial Arts Program. Educators there want to sell the idea that every man needs to know enough about the use of tools to build a better mousetrap, or at least enough to supervise the operation with intelligence.

To quote Charles A. Vars, one half of a young, two-man industrial arts staff: "The increasing complexity of our industrial economy and the increasing amount of mechanization, make it essential that industrial art experiences be regarded as basic and fundamental for all youths."

If he gets this notion across, he will be reversing a well established pattern. For far too long in too many schools, manual arts and/or industrial arts classes have been educational "dumping grounds", a place to stick the non-college bound student or the boy with academic limitations. As a result, more students have elected to stay away from industrial arts than have elected to see what such courses might have to offer them.

Old Ideas

Part of this attitude can be blamed on the limited scope of old manual arts programs and part of it on the limited publicity given new philosophies.

As Charles Vars explains it, the old manual arts theory was to teach a boy how to use his hands and equip him to handle a trade. The teenager was taught to plane a board to saw a piece of wood etc. and the project or product he turned out was the end result.

Today the "whys" are far more important than the "whats." The prime motivation for the student may still be the satisfaction he derives from putting together a usable hutch or a storage case for his record collection. But what he experiences enroute to this satisfaction is carefully planned by a teacher who is much more concerned with skills, knowledge, attitudes and other fundamental educational values. In spite of himself, the IA student is going to learn, for example, why glue will hold two pieces of wood together, why metals react as they do to heat and stress etc. etc. etc.

"There is no place in our curriculum for simple busywork without purpose," Vars emphasizes. Nor is it the purpose of the industrial arts program to train students for a specific occupation or develop skills for the earning of a livelihood. This is the job of the vocational school, the teacher explains. What the IA department attempts to do is help the student develop a set of occupational guidance values and create avocational interests.

The courses give the non-college bound student a chance to learn what types of further technical training will most interest him. The youth who is going after a degree in science or engineering hits college better prepared if he has an IA background. As Vars points out, engineering schools today pre-suppose a boy's knowledge of technical drawing and his understanding of the working of milling machines, lathes and the likes.

Sound Preparation

And beyond this, what do IA courses offer for every boy who will be a man? Most every adult male, liberal arts major, musician or whatever, will someday buy a home or some furniture. Most every male will have to paint a house or repair a faucet, or build some bookcases - or hire someone to do these jobs and be prepared to make a judgment about how adequately they have performed.

The student who completes a full IA course can build his own house if he has to - or wants to. Or he can keep a sharp eye on the builder he contracts. These are among the advantages of IA training for the average male.

The present industrial arts curriculum includes courses in wood, metal and drawing, two in each division.

The initial course in wood is an introduction to woodworking and includes: recognition and safe use of hand tools and machine tools; the development of knowledge in and skills with joint construction, fasteners, hardware, lumber, laminates, finishing techniques etc.

In the more advanced wood course, students learn about house construction and furniture making. They are told about various methods and techniques used in building and given instruction in advanced machine operations, industrial design and fabrication.

The metals courses first introduce tools, materials, processes, mechanics and design and then move into the field of machine work on sheet metal and wrought iron. The drawing courses begin slow and take a student finally into the areas of architectural and machine drafting, surface development and intersection and descriptive geometry.

When the new high school is completed there will be courses in electricity and electronics and the addition of facilities for foundry work by students in metals courses.

Now all Charles Vars, James Carroll (the mechanical drawing instructor) and the guidance people have to do is convince a larger segment of the male school population that industrial arts students are not without status.

At one meeting we taught a bluebird group to square dance. On the way back we stopped at the savings bank and saw the Bohemian glass blower.

In early May we went to the Camp Rally at South Church. The next week we made plans for a hike to be taken on May 12. The hike was at Harold Parker Forest. Later in the month, we marched in the Memorial Day parade. On June 2 we went to the Grand Council Fire and received our World Gatherer's ring, the certificate, ten purple beads. On the 10th we had our last meeting — a ceremonial at which we received beads for the past three months.

RESEARCH PAYS

At one time or another, each of us uses the products of pharmaceutical research to maintain or restore physical or mental health.

Yet the average person is frequently unaware of the investment, in terms of money and scientific talent, that the American pharmaceutical industry makes in research and the resulting benefits to his health.

In 1965 the nation's pharmaceutical manufacturers spent nearly $350 million on research. Thanks in large measure to the work done in their laboratories, medical advances in this country have been remarkable. Prime examples are the dramatic reductions in deaths from such diseases as tuberculosis, influenza, and pneumonia.

When Educators Fail

A minority of students and faculty members and commencement exercises have been protesting the presence of certain speakers. In two instances, when Secretary of Defense McNamara was a speaker, students and faculty members have walked out. When Ambassador Goldberg addressed the Brandeis University graduates, a minority of students and of faculties protested the awarding of a degree to him.

In these instances the protests were directed against American policy in Vietnam. McNamara and Goldberg were targets because they are members of the Administration.

They were peaceful demonstrations, of the kind upheld by Supreme Court Justice Clark in an address at Suffolk University commencement exercises. Despite the fact that some have no sane foundation, Clark discerned in the mosaic of demonstration an array of constructive activities and progress. Peaceable demonstrations, he said, show our constitutional processes at work.

Goldberg too welcomed "the freedom of expression that is being manifested by students in the colleges and universities," but he pointed out that, if freedom of speech is to be perfected, the rules of the game must be preserved.

This was a politely phrased warning against demonstrations as an end in themselves in accord with something Arthur Schlesinger said in another commencement address - that American students had something better to do than emulate riotous Latin Americans and strive for their LSD.

The fact is that demonstrations - peaceful or disorderly - are crude means of free expression by literate and articulate people. The opportunities for free expression are almost limitless in this country. The spectacle of nominally enlightened people resorting to them makes us doubt that our institutions of higher education are civilizing influences.

The doubt is increased by the bad manners of the demonstrators. Simple courtesy requires that a speaker get respectful attention. But if faculty members don't know this, probably we can't expect their students to know it.

Compact Comment

The world's a funny place. In Florida, Lake Okeechobee was getting so high earlier this spring that engineers let some of the water flow into the Gulf of Mexico. The level of the lake was abnormally high because of unusually rainy weather.

While here, in a frantic attempt to keep the populace supplied with water through the summer, we were damming up a trickling brook to keep its waters from heading out toward the Atlantic. Seems like the distribution of both people and water is out of kilter.

The Townsman is to be congratulated, for its fine editorials, and the very good coverage of the voice of the people. With the Townsman, Phillips Academy and the Town officials, Andover is in good hands.

I have a grandson (Stephen Andover Markey) who is 5 years old. We hope that in the near future he will attend the Phillips Andover Academy.

I hope sincerely, that the Andover Townsman will continue for many years to come.

To the Editor of the Townsman:
The School Committee showed wisdom and courage in its decision to establish pupil-teacher ratios that are in line with Willis Commission recommendations. It was a wise decision because it will help meet the expanding needs for a full education of all Andover children. It was a courageous decision because it will cost us all money; many a Massachusetts school committee will drag its feet in reducing class sizes until receipt of state funds depends on such action.

As an ex-teacher, it is extraordinary to me that so many of Andover's elementary teachers are able to cope in such a superior manner with individual differences in classes of 30 and 35. Lowering the elementary classes to 25 pupils will allow the teachers more flexibility in planning her instructional program, and more time to work with children of all kinds of ability. The School Committee's action is important because it helps establish the conditions in which our teachers can continue to do their work with professional excellence.

Down the Years with The Townsman

75 Years Ago - June, 1891

A party of local men went to Swampscott last Friday on a fishing trip and had good luck. E. Pike caught the largest fish.

Work on the electric road has begun in earnest. There being a gang of about fifty laborers busy on the Hill. They are mostly Italians. Several lengths of rail have already been laid. The workers are living in a tent pitched in the field near the arch bridge in Shawsheen.

With the thermometer at 97 degrees above Tuesday and only 55 Wednesday, it is no wonder that La Grippe finds some victims by such rapid changes.

Jedediah Burr, an old and respected resident of West Parish, died yesterday at his home of old age. He was 88 years old.

50 Years Ago - June, 1916

Carl Elander has opened a clothes pressing and tailoring establishment at Hampton Beach.

Wilson Knipe Jr. was among those who took part in a piano recital given in Boston recently by the pupils of Everett Titcomb, a former organist at Christ Church.

What effect will the war have upon the pending election? Undoubtedly one man's guess is good as another's, but how can it be very helpful if war actually takes place? Badly prepared, and very inefficiently equipped, entering into a contest with people who know no rules nor follow any precedents, but like pirates on the high seas feel that they sacrifice little even though they may gain even less, we find the Mexican people with tremendous advantage over the soldier we may send to Mexico.

Speaking of Punchard and the new building . . . we cannot refrain from expressing the hope that under the reorganization of the school committee with a new superintendent there may be created a little stricter sort of discipline in control of students outside of school. When it is possible to see a half dozen school boys at almost any hour of the day walking the streets of the town and smoking cigarettes . . . something is seriously lax.

25 Years Ago - June, 1941

The Board of Public Works called in the town finance committee, the selectmen and the directors of the Taxpayers' Assn. to ask their advice on water rates. The Board's quandary arose from the recent action of a local firm in shifting from ammonia cooling to cooling by town water, the result being the depletion of the town water supply by the amount of 400,000 gallons a day. It was estimated if two other large firms in town did the same thing, there'd be no water left for domestic consumption. As it is now, the Board has had several requests for meters for farm irrigation which they have turned down because of the drain on the system.

10 Years Ago - June, 1956

James Winters, 9 Fletcher St. and Raymond Paolino son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Paolino of Lovejoy Road, will represent Punchard High School at Boys State.

Miss Marjorie Stewart of High Plain Rd. is spending the summer months at camp in Deering, N. H. Nicholas Edmonds of Reservation Road received third prize in the sculpture division at the Fifth Annual Arts Festival, in Boston.

James Butler of Andover Street, Scoutmaster of Troop 76, spent the weekend at Sebago Lake with the Order of the Arrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Ballou of Center Street spent the weekend as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hood of Manchester, N. H.

Unplanned Urban Sprawl A Threat In Many Areas

by JAMES BREAGY

(Massachusetts Audubon Society)

It is hard enough to convince some owners of large open spaces that their property has value above and beyond what can be measured by the dollar sign.

What is worse is the inability of owners who want to preserve their open spaces to hang onto them in the face of increasing taxes. In effect, in many places open spaces are being taxed rather than bulldozed out of existence.

That something is being done about the loss of open spaces is obvious from the widespread and growing conservation commission movement in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and other eastern states. But direct acquisition of open spaces by local government and private trust organizations is not the only answer.

Despite all the arguments that open space acquisition is cheaper in the long run than the costly services which result from new development, there are limits to how much land a community can afford to buy and to how much the local taxpayer is willing to support such expenditures. Fortunately some owners of large areas make gifts of them to towns and private groups. But many others cannot afford to give them away.

The building boom which has grown by leaps and bounds since World War II has raised the market value of land to a point never contemplated a generation ago. Swamps and wetlands, which developers would have considered infeasible for development not too long ago, are now eyed as valuable development tracts. The fair market value of the land is based on its potential for subdivided development.

The tragedy of it is that land owners who never dreamed of letting their land be cut up and built upon, think that way because some local assessors do. The owner must pay taxes on his land as if it were potential housing development regardless of his intention. Realistically, the assessor has a point since the owner could get the developer's market price.

Keeping land open has thus become almost economically untenable for many an owner of moderate income.

The answer, of course, lies in taxing property according to its present and intended use regardless of what value it might have to a developer. If an owner has no intention of allowing a developer to buy it, he should not be taxed as though he were a land speculator. In many communities, owners get tax breaks because they surrender their right to subdivide and develop their land or sell to someone who would subdivide.

Far too many communities, however, do not allow for such open land easements. The pressure on assessors to get up the revenue is great. And land owners are often-times suspected of wanting to have things both ways.

Ed. Note: Assessor William Russell said this week that it is Andover's policy to classify open land as woodland, tillable etc. and assess accordingly. Present rather than future market values of such areas are considered in establishing assessed values of undeveloped acreage, he said.

Russell added that the company handling the current land equalization survey have been told by local assessors to think in these terms. He noted, however, that even on this basis assessments of open areas in West and South Andover will likely go up this year since property in those sections of town has become increasingly valuable since the revaluation in 1958.

The problem is one Andover assessors have had in mind over the years, Russell pointed out. "We have never believed in forcing land to be put on the market . . . we don't want to push present farmers into selling land for development," he said.

A bill to set up a state Open Lands Commission is now being studied by the Massachusetts Legislature. It provides for 80 percent tax break for owners who agree to preserve their land as it is for the next 20 years. If an owner changes his mind, he would have to pay his community two-thirds of the assessed value of his property for the right to develop or sell it for development. (i.e., on land assessed at $1,000 he would have to pay $750, cash.)

Local communities, and particularly assessors, must begin to think differently about the value of open land if unplanned urban sprawl is to be arrested.

Opinion Potpourri

RONALD REAGAN:

Ronald Reagan, Republican Candidate for governor of California, says a "creative society" should be substituted for the Great Society. Such a society would "return authority to local communities to run their own affairs," he told the National Press Club last week.

NEW YORK TIMES:

Roads are like rabbits. Where there are two, they soon beget a third.

Conservationists who fight to protect trees, green space, and wilderness against the highway builders' endless ribbons of concrete have long recognized this truism about roads. But the National Park Service, which should be defending unspoiled areas, pushes heedlessly for a second transmountain road through the Great Smoky National Park and has many road-building plans elsewhere. . . .

The openness and wildness and naturalness of any region are what make it worth preserving as a park. If too many highways are built through a park in the name of giving people easy access, the true purpose and value of the park are destroyed.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: . . . France (and the rest of Western Europe) cannot be sure that under every circumstance it could protect itself without American help.

If that is so, is it not quixotic for France, in the person of President de Gaulle, to seek the reduction of that same military which might again have to come to France's rescue? And is not Washington right in feeling that France, having twice been saved from the inevitable but not dishonorable effects of its own weakness, might be expected to show more foresight if not more gratitude?

Nothing would please Americans more than to be assured that France would never again need American military help. But alas, is not the case. Under such circumstances should not the would-be rescued show greater concern for the problems of the would-be rescuer?

ELLIOT L. RICHARDSON: "The people deserve in their attorney general a skilled and sympathetic advocate. This is not a job for the political opportunist. There is no room in this sensitive office for those primarily concerned with power and patronage. The high standard established by Mr. [Edmund] Brooke must be maintained and advanced."

C. C. Kimball Is Commended

The late Charles Carleton Kimball is commended for his service to the town of Andover in a resolution adopted by the Andover Board of Selectmen.

The full text of the resolution, forwarded to Mr. Kimball's widow, reads as follows:

Whereas Charles Carleton Kimball represented all that is selfless and good in public office, having served the Town of Andover with distinction as a Trustee of the Pynchard Free School for thirty-two years, having been elected to the School Committee from 1952 to 1955 and its Chairman in 1954, and having played a major part in the reorganization of Town Government;

And whereas his judgment was sound, his wisdom sought after, his devotion to his family and his church completely dedicated, his opinions in Town Meeting clear and unequivocal, his beret-topped head familiar to all his fellow-townpeople, and his sly humor endearing;

Now, therefore, be it resolved

Stanley E. Butcher, 4 Washington Ave., received a master's degree in History at Northeastern University June 19.

The Andover man is principal of Parker Junior High School, Reading and chairman of its social studies department. He is also a Civil War historian and for the past several years has been preparing a technical biography of the leaders of the Army of Tennessee. His master's thesis was closely related to this subject.

He has served on state and local Civil War Centennial Committees and is a member of the Andover Civil War Roundtable, a group of local residents promoting academic interest in the war.

Butcher attributes his interest in the Civil War to the theory that its events have had a bearing on today's society.

Butcher received his bachelor's degree in English at Northeastern in 1943 after which he became a civilian cryptographer for the U.S. Army Signal Corps.

Three Aid Park Drive

Boston's Museum of Science, heading full steam into its eight-million-dollar expansion fund program, has enlisted a hardworking corps of volunteers, including three persons from this area, to bolster its team efforts.

Joining the group of volunteer solicitors are Philip K. Allen, 1 Highland Rd., director and trustee and member, major gifts committee; Mrs. Waters Kellogg, 69 Phillips St., member, major gifts committee; and Mrs. Fredric O'Brien, 4 Sunset Rock Rd., member, major gifts committee.

The Expansion Fund Program was launched only this spring, yet already, museum officials announce, a total of $2,800,000, or nearly one-third of its goal, has been reached.

Heading up the campaign roster are Carlton P. Fuller, chairman of the museum's board and Mrs. Harold D. Hodgkinson, museum president.

In opening the fund program, they revealed plans to construct a new wing and related parking facilities on the Science Park acreage. The proposed three-story wing will add 125,000 square feet to the present museum plant, tripling exhibit space and making possible accommodation of twice as many visitors as now crowd in.

The new building will also make it possible to display exciting new mammoth exhibits, like the full-size, 20-foot-high dinosaur, Tyrannosaurus Rex, just acquired. The head of this monster is now on exhibit at the museum, which has had no room to spare for the body and tail.

Meanwhile, museum officials are continuing to enlist interested solicitors to help in further campaign phases, notably business and industry, and general solicitation.

Courses For HS Students

Salem State College will again offer a high school summer study program this year from July 5 to August 12. Classes are scheduled at the college campus and meet mornings only, 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday. Enrollment is open to public and private school pupils who will complete grades 8, 9, 10, or 11 in June, and this year on a limited basis, those who will complete grade 12 in June also.

The program of study offers courses of an enrichment and developmental nature in all courses scheduled for the average and above average student. The curriculum includes courses in elementary and advanced biology, physics, chemistry, mathematics, types of literature, British and American prose and poetry, creative writing, elementary and intermediate French and Spanish.

A developmental reading skills program, a new course this year, will be offered in conjunction with the English program. The purpose of this new course is to develop in the student the ability to read rapidly and well, particularly developing the ability to vary the rate of reading to the type of material to be read.

Registration forms and course descriptions may be obtained by writing to: William D. Devitt, High School Summer Study Program, State College at Salem, Mass.

Interfaith Group Here

An interfaith group has been working quietly behind the scenes in Andover to carry Ecumenism
"to a point which otherwise would have taken years."

Organized by local priests and ministers, the group has met privately for interfaith dialogue over the past year.

The keynote of the program has been "Know Thy Neighbor", and discussions of one-word topics such as Charity, Confession, Sacraments etc. have been used toward this end. Ideas on race relations, poverty and other social problems were also pooled.

The final meeting for the season was held recently at West
Parish Church where the film
"Parable," a feature of the New

Board Talks Sites In Closed Session

Questioned this week about the legality of an executive session held by the selectmen last week prior to a vote on West Andover land takings, Chairman William Stewart said the session "absolutely" met the requirements of the state open meeting law.

The board agreed, after the short closed-door meeting, to proceed with eminent domain takings in order to acquire property owned by George Stevens and Rene and Helen G. Demers in an area accessible from an unimproved section of Cross Street. The land is to be used for elementary school construction and its acquisition was authorized at the last Town Meeting.

Manager Richard Bowen told the selectmen prior to the executive session that negotiations with the owners had failed. He said Stevens is asking $91,500 on 61 acres which are assessed for $3,600 and appraised for $12-200.

Demers has asked in writing for a total of $63,000 for 21 acres which are now assessed at $1,500 and appraised for $6,600.

Recommending a taking, the manager said that adding this 81 acres to land already owned in the area by the town and AVIS would create the largest single open area in town. He further said that he considered Stevens' and Demers' asking prices "completely out of proportion" because the area is completely unimproved - without water, sewage and utilities. A portion of Cross Street is unacceptable, he added.

Selectman Sidney P. White spoke out against resorting to eminent domain takings unless an "emergency" situation exists. He said he tries to put himself in the place of an owner who has possibly had the foresight to invest in low price property . . . maybe as an investment for his children and his grandchildren. "We are on the verge of taking it away and that I do not like," White added.

Responding to White's comments about the potential worth of the land in question, Manager Bowen said it is because of the prospect of increased values and prices that the town should act now. "If Andover is to remain Andover, we must make this kind of acquisition or my children and yours will damn you and me," the manager said emphatically.

He said three criteria had been used in selecting the locale: one, the land is in an unimproved area; two, it is situated so that a large tract can be put together from one or two owners; and three, it is not far from the general committee for a site.

The vote to authorize the taking called for a settlement on the basis of appraised valuations.

Selectman White said the board expenditure of another $75,000 if the matter goes to court. He said he hesitated to make a commitment on land in a developing area where some acreage is going for as much as $5,000 an acre.

At White's mention of a possible court settlement cost, Manager Bowen said he thought it imprudent to speculate about this in public. Town Counsel Frederic O'Brien has a tough enough time in court, he told White.

Chairman Stewart interrupted the general discussion to call the board into executive session. Polled since, members Watters and Allen agreed with Stewart that information which "might adversely affect the public security, the financial interest of the county or its subdivisions or the reputation of any persons" was talked over during this period. Selectman Roger Collins said he could not recall the discussion in sufficient detail to be certain on this point and Selectman White said any query on this should be directed to the chairman since it was he who called the closed-door session.

Men's Club Plans Benefit Y

The Lawrence Y's Men's Club again this year sponsor an evening at North Shore Music Theatre to benefit the YMCA-YWCA Building Fund.

The show will be "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying". Starring in the July 12 performance will be Lanny Ross, a singing star of the thirties and forties and a contemporary of Rudy Vallee who played the role in the Broadway smash hit.

Chairman of the project is Dean Webster and other Andover men working on the committee include Arthur Clinton, Lindsay Shuford, Charles Poore, Thomas Majerison, Alexander Blamire Jr., George Lybrand, and R. Kingman Webster.

The Y's Men's Club will have a booth at the Sidewalk Bazaar Friday and Saturday. Tickets may be obtained at the booth or at anytime from members of the Y's Men's Club or by calling the YMCA.

RICHARD W. SCHREIBER
Seniors Honor UNH Professor

A former Andover resident, now a botany professor at the University of New Hampshire, was honored by students during UNH's commencement for his contributions to "the advancement of student-faculty relations and to the intellectual atmosphere of the University."

Associate Professor Richard W. Schreiber, a member of the UNH faculty since 1957, received the Senior Key Award. The award was established this year by the men's honorary society for seniors to recognize outstanding qualities in a member of the faculty.

The professor is the son of Mrs. William Schreiber, Barnard Arms apartments and the late William Schreiber.

He received his secondary school education at Phillips Academy. He then attended Harvard, transferring in 1936 to UNH to obtain undergraduate and master's degrees in horticulture and biology. He was awarded PhD at the University of Wisconsin in 1955.

DOUG HOWE

about this question:

"I know elderly couples that have bought Annuity Policies at age 65, which pay them $200 per month as long as either one lives. I think this sense of security is wonderful. Is it wise to pay monthly into a Retirement Policy which becomes an annuity at age 65?"
